Southplanet, the site of reference

On ACP works and artists

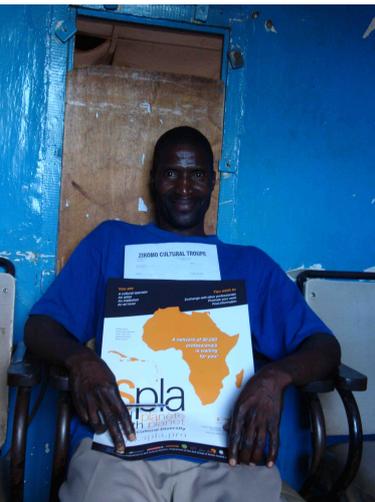

Southplanet is THE reference site for ACP (Africa, Caribbean, Pacific) artists and their works. It focuses on all creative domains, from cinema, music, literature, visual arts, theatre, dance, architecture, fashion, and design to patrimony.

The information referenced ranges from artist bios to event announcements, pages on music albums, films, books, cultural news, or the presentation of organizations working in the arts sector.

A wide audience

The site addresses both the general public interested in these questions, and art sector professionals: producers, publishers, researchers, journalists, programmers, cultural operators, funders and, of course, artists. It is available in four languages (English, French, Portuguese, Spanish, and soon Arabic), giving access to a highly international public.

Putting artists of the South in charge of their communication

- Worldwide, the total amount of information available on so-called Northern countries and notably their arts and cultures is incomparably greater than that available on the so-called countries of the South. That is true for all media (radio, television, newspapers, Internet) and mediums (books, films, journals, etc.). Southplanet has chosen to focus specifically on the Internet for two reasons: not only is Internet the fastest and cheapest means of communication internationally, but it is also the only media that allows its users to be active players, enabling them not only to receive information, but also to produce it. The aim here, then, is to allow users from the South to produce the information that concerns them.
- The site enables cultural professionals to increase their visibility and networks. Via the site, professionals can indeed contact one another, chat on forums, present their projects, look for partners, create their own communications tools (press kits, personalized mini websites), etc.

An interactive site free of rights

Pooling the resources of several operators, Southplanet is the largest cultural database of the South

+ I add my information

My profile

Southplanet is an interactive site, whose information is available under the Creative Commons Attribution ShareAlike licence (CC BY-SA 1.0): no one owns the site's data; its content can be freely copied and modified, so long as the source is cited and they are in turn redistributed under this same licence.

That guarantees an overall sharing of information (anyone can add content to the site), maximum circulation of data (anyone can copy the information on their own media), and the survival of the database beyond the original base compiled by its creators.

Southplanet's plus points

What differentiates Southplanet from a site like Wikipedia (the informative part), or sites like Facebook or MySpace (the network and promotions part)?

Southplanet is a professional, specialist network whose search motors make it possible to easily find profiles and contact details of interest to professionals, in the form of listings. There is no need, therefore, to know a name in advance before finding it: it suffices for filmmakers, for example, to search all the camera operators or actors in the country they want to shoot a film in to see all the corresponding profiles displayed, plus a file so that they can contact them, without seeing their email addresses (to avoid spams).

Southplanet offers the advantage of at the same time pooling information, making sure it is well-referenced on search motors, and enabling people to find it easily on the site.

An example of a national portal: Kenya (<http://kenya.spla.pro>)

The screenshot shows the homepage of the Kenya national portal. At the top, it displays statistics for the SPLA's database and the number of users on the portal. The main header features the title 'Mtandao wa Sanaa Kenya' and a search icon. Below the header is a navigation menu with categories: ART CATEGORIES, LATEST NEWS, FESTIVALS, and ABOUT US. The main content area is titled 'what's on' and lists 'Upcoming events' including a 'Life Drawing Workshop' (March to July 2014), a 'Moses Nyawanda Exhibition' (June 2014), and a 'Kiota [NEST] Festival' (June to August 2014). On the right side, there are sections for 'Join the network!', 'Newsletter' (with an email subscription form), and 'News' (with a call for applications for music).
